The CMA began an initial investigation into the issue of fake reviews back in Ma y 2020, but on Friday it announced it would look into whether Amazon and Google have done enough to detect and remove such reviews.

Large numbers of five-star reviews are a key element in boosting a product's rankings on Amazon's and Google websites. Misleading reviews are there a massive e-commerce problem, most notably for Amazon.

The CMA said it will now "gather further information to determine whether t hese two firms may have broken consumer law by taking insufficient action to pro tect shoppers from fake reviews."

Investigate and, where necessary, remove promptly fake and misleading reviews fr om their platforms.

"Our worry is that millions of online shoppers could be misled by reading f ake reviews and then spending their money based on those recommendations," said Andrea Coscelli, the CMA's chief executive.

"Equally, it's simply not fair if some businesses can fake 5-star review ws to give their products or services the most prominence, while law-abiding bus inesses lose out," said Coscelli.

If the CMA determines that Amazon and Google have broken consumer protection law

, it can take enforcement action.
